2:49 AM me: howdy
Jonathan: Hello. me: not sure if you saw this, but hopefully it will assist in getting the word out on McCain
http://www.vanityfair.com/online/politics/2010/01/ex-conservative-charles-johnsons-next-crusade.html
2:50 AM Also, I'm working on getting a piece on Vanderbilt sold to some or another publication most importantly Jonathan: Great. Remember GQ had an article praising Vanderbilt for its treatment of minorities a few years ago.
me: I've begun work on Operation Fuck Everyone 2:51 AM Jonathan: Also a magazine called "American Heritage," I believe.
me: which I will explain further soon Jonathan: I think I get the idea... me: but which will be a means by which to reform the media from the outside Jonathan: Then there's "The Crisis" magazine. me: I'd like to have you involved later on, if you'd be interested in doing so. Will explain more soon.
2:52 AM Jonathan: Sure, sounds great.
So many reporters are terrible: look at the Edwards story. An AP reporter wrote that it was not clear where Hunter was living.
2:53 AM I mean, are there not tax records, voting records, supermarket sightings?
Woodward and Bernstein must be turning in their graves---and they're not even dead yet.
2:54 AM For "The Crisis," I don't know the name of the editor off-hand, but for some reason he asked to be my "friend" on Facebook, so you can find him, I guess.
He says he is aware of what happened to me.
2:55 AM And this may be a long shot, but I believe Soledad O'Brien did the "Black in America" program two years ago, and she and I are both featured in the same article of Harvard Magazine.

2:56 AM So that might be an "in" with CNN.
2:57 AM (I don't know if Harvard Magazine would care, but the editor is I believe Nell Porter Brown is an editor, and you can almost certainly get good quotes from Professor Allen Counter about me, and neutral quotes from Benedict Gross, perhaps. He was dean of the college.)

2:58 AM I'll finish the Vanity Fair piece now. Thanks for the alert.
